TOLEDO, OH (WTOL) - Dozens of Boy Scouts volunteered at west Toledo's historic Woodlawn Cemetery Saturday.

In fact, more than 60 scouts, their troop leaders and parents spent hours restoring grave markers.

The group is working on restoring hundreds of grave markers, which is just one of the many services the scouts perform every day in the U.S.

"Every year throughout the country, thousands and thousands of hours are committed back to the community... Whether it's building a new trail at camp or a state park or out at Woodlawn Cemetery, we're everywhere and we're doing everything," said scout Jonathan Edler.

The project is specifically connected to the local Boy Scouts community that is celebrating the Boy Scouts of America's 100th anniversary.
